[20] [21] Main article: History of the Indonesian rupture during colonial time, the currency used in what now Indonesia was the Dutch Guden. [22] The PAÍ was invaded in 1942 by Japanese, which began to print its own version of the channel, who fought for independence, both introduced rival coins in 1946 with the Dutch Print of a new channel, and the Indonesians issuing the first version of the rupee on October 3, 1946. [25] [24] Between 1946 and 1950 a large number of coins distributed in Indonesia, with the Japanese Gulden that continued prevailing together with the two new coins and several local variants. [24] This situation ended when the federal government, now in complete control after the Dutch recognition of its independence, began monetary reforms between 1950 and 1951. [24] The rupture was declared the only legal currency, and other currencies are exchanged for Rupiah to types that were often unfavorable for the holders. [24] Exchange rate and inflation The break has been subject to high inflation for most of its existence (which as internationally recognized currency must be dated to 1950). The Riau Islands and the half Indonesian of New Guinea (Irian Barat) had their own variants of the rupees in the past, but they were subsumed in the National Rupia in 1964 and 1971, respectively (see Riau Rupiah and West Irian Rupiah). On 13 November, BI introduced new regulations requiring foreign currency purchases more than $100,000 a month to be supported by documentation of an underlying transaction and a tax number. Two opposite developments were the cause. The official exchange rate was initially set at RP 0.25 to US$ 1 to 13 December 1965, a rate that did not represent the reality, as the multiple exchange rate system remained in force for the time being.
